L'Avion Announces Results for First Quarter 2008

New York, April 24, 2008 – L'Avion, the first all business class French airline, today announced results for the first quarter 2008, which were higher than projected with regard to load factor, regularity and frequencies.

L'Avion reported a load factor for March of 78%, and an average load factor for the entire first quarter of 71%. In the first quarter 2008, L'Avion accommodated 2.5 times more passengers than in the first quarter 2007. During the first quarter of 2008, L'Avion transported more than 13,000 customers.

Since January 2008, the airline began increasing flight frequency, and now offers two daily flights on the Newark-Orly route.

“We greatly increased the number of business-class seats with the addition of the second flight, and our 78% load factor for March speaks to this continued market demand to fly L'Avion,” said Marc Rochet, President and CEO of L'Avion. “We exceeded expectations, and we believe these results validate the measured strategy and growth of L'Avion, even in a challenging global economic climate.”

L'Avion reported a rate of 99% reliability for the first quarter 2008, with an average on-time departure rate (within fifteen minutes of scheduled take-off) of 84.7% : therefore matching with business travellers expectations.

Offering flights seven days a week with premium service for a low fare, L'Avion has been selected by many companies, both French and American, who are eager in these times to receive high quality for maximum value. The United States account for 45% of total sales, and France accounts for 55%. 70% of total bookings derive from Internet sites and L'Avion call centers in the United States and France, with the remainder originating by L'Avion's travel agency partners.
