L'Avion Announces Third Daily Flight on New York – Paris Route
*Reservations Open for Customers Through Codeshare with OpenSkies

New York, May 22, 2008 – L'Avion, the first all business class French airline, today announced the opening of reservations for customers on the third daily flight between Paris and New York, established through a codeshare agreement with OpenSkies, British Airways' new premium transatlantic subsidiary

Beginning on June 19th, L'Avion will offer 3 daily flights between Paris Orly and New York. The OpenSkies flights will depart at 5.30 pm from JFK airport, thus offering L'Avion's passengers an additional schedule and choice of airport.

L'Avion will market OpenSkies "PREM +" class tickets for the same prices as L'Avion's Business Class. "PREM +" is the equivalent of L'Avion's Business Class (two rows of two seats separated by a wide central aisle, power outlets at every seat and individual digital video players with an on demand in-flight entertainment).

With 19 weekly flights between Paris and New York, L'Avion claims its will offer its customers flexibility and additional comfort and services. Bookings will be open from today on www.lavion.com, 1 (866)-692-6759 and in all travel agencies.

Marc Rochet, President and CEO of L'Avion said, "This new daily Business Class flight from New York JFK in partnership with OpenSkies allows us to develop our commercial offer with a broader range of flights and the choice between two airports in New York".
